BRAJ KISHOR GUPTA

Communication is the lifeline. Cosmic communication is the craving of all souls! To live, we need to communicate and to live to the fullest; we ought to discover our spiritual moorings. Communication is the expression of our ideas, views and feelings. It is a tool for ventilating our emotions—a process whereby we help others to understand the maize of our thoughts and needs. Cosmic communication is more about understanding rather expecting our fellow friends to understand us. The more you aspire to contribute and give back to society, the more coherent would be the cosmic communication. Communication is just one among many needs for human survival. It is true the present day research highlights the growing role and relevance of communication skill both in personal and professional life. The youth, in particular, across the world are under tremendous pressure to master the art of communication. This has a direct bearing on the way they are going to survive and thrive in this matter of fact world, where business is what matters the most. Corporate corridors have become new portals of opportunities. We are getting submerged in ideas of skills, profit and professionalism. We are getting lost in meeting targets and deadlines, bringing to our mind the prophetic lines of William Wordsworth: The world is too much with us; late and soon/Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers/Little we see in Nature that is ours.../

Communication has thus become a means towards achieving certain ends. It is only a process in which we share information and ideas but with an ulterior motive in mind. It is of utmost importance to understand the finer aspects of communication. In its etymological sense, the English word communication is derived from the Latin verb communicare, which means to participate, to impart, to share. Communication must be understood as two way traffic, where meanings are exchanged between two and more persons through a common set of symbols called language. It is a delicate process, given the complex nature of human beings. There is a need for communication to be meaningful; brevity is the soul of meaningful communication. There should be clarity and intent with regard to the choice of words and idioms. The language has to be effortless and transparent, free from jargons and acronyms.

Cosmic Communication is the expression of human heart. It is soul's longing for finding deeper meaning and purpose of life. It is an eternal quest for spiritual fulfillment that transcends all man-made barriers and boundaries. It is beyond all limiting beliefs and religious dogmas that divide humankind. It is a feeling that can lift our belief system and uplift lives. It is a plea for expanding the horizon of human minds. It is an attempt to rediscover our roots, on the basis of which civilisations flourished in the past. Cosmic communication can be vital to nurturing global civilisation that would promote common value system. The world needs common ground, rich and vibrant in culture, ethos, values and an outlook soaked in the milk of human kindness. It is time to embrace cosmic communication for one can feel the gradual shift taking place in human consciousness!
